ROAD RECORD FOR FLYING MAXWELL CAR

Beat Train Hour and a Half in Three Hundred Mile Run Without Violating Speed Ordinances.

Wiping the slate clean of all former records in rapid transit by motor car or by train, between Detroit and Indianapolis, Ray McNamara in a stock Maxwell touring car has just registered a performance at which, it is freely predicted, dust eaters of the two cities will shoot for some time in vain. McNamara's outgoing trip from Detroit was made in 8 hours, 58 minutes; the return trip in 10 hours, 49 minutes. Running time for the round trip 622 miles—was 19 hours, 47 minutes. Between start and finish but 20 hours, 1 minutes elapsed.

Checked at Both Ends.

The Maxwell was checked out of Detroit by W. D. Edenburn, American Automobile association representative, at 3:11 a. m. It was checked in at the Soldier's monument in Indianapolis—311 miles away—at 12:09 p. m., by Jack Baci, automobile editor of the Indianapolis News. Baci checked the car out of Indianapolis at 12:23 p. m.; Edenburn checked it in at the finish at 11:12 p. m. The trip started and ended at the Maxwell offices on Woodward avenue.

The first half of the trip was made chiefly by daylight, and McNamara took a shot at the schedule of the fast Big Four train which takes a short cut of 298.6 miles between the cities and makes the run in ten hours, 25 minutes. The Maxwell lowered this by one hour, 27 minutes. At Indianapolis the driver snatched a hurried luncheon and filled the gasoline tank—his only stop in the whole trip. Daylight lasted halfway through the return trip. Then darkness fell, and, later, there was a fog.

The car in which the run was made is one of the first 1916 models turned out at the big Detroit plant and had already been run more than 17,000 miles, including one trip across the continent. Recently it has been one of several cars which have been running under observation of the Maxwell engineering department, to determine the effects of indefinite road abuse. Much of this running has been over the Detroit-Indianapolis course—a typical country road with plenty of hills, rough going, sand and mud.

Through Three States.

The route chosen for the tour included Ypsilanti, Tecumseh, Adrian and Morenci, Mich.; Bryan and Hicksville, O.; Fort Wayne, Huntington, Marion and Anderson, Ind. McNamara started with a definite schedule calling for a south-bound trip in ten hours, and a return in twelve. This schedule was bettered in virtually every hour of the run, though McNamara was careful to fracture no speed ordinances of the cities and villages through which he passed.

"Sheer speed had nothing to do with our record," declared McNamara after the trip. "Consistent, steady plugging is what reeled off the miles. The car that gets our record will have to be one that can equal the acceleration of the Maxwell—that can jump from ten miles an hour to near its limit in 200 yards. That is the quality that counts in fast road work, just as it does in every-day traffic."

"The Sporting Duchess"

"The Sporting Duchess" with popular Rose Coughlan in the title role is unquestionably the most fascinating photoplay of sporting life ever shown. Always absorbingly interesting when acting on the stage, "The Sporting Duchess" is doubly gripping on the screen because of the added features that are impossible of reproduction in an ordinary theater. One of these is a thrilling horse race. But even without the great race track setting, the story itself is a powerful one and gives unlimited scope to a company of rare skill. And such a cast has been selected with none other than the widely celebrated star, Rose Coughlan, in the stellar role.

Nearly twenty-five thousand dollars have been spent in staging Cecil Raleigh's masterpiece—a photoplay that is sure to be one of the sensational hits of the season. Briefly, the story is thus: Lord Desbro and Captain Mostyn, both officers in an English regiment, are suitors for the hand of Muriel. Desborough wins, and marries her, thereby incurring the enmity of his unsuccessful rival. The regiment is ordered to India, and while here Desborough falls under the wiles of an adventuress, Vivian Darvelle. Mostyn reports this flirtation to Muriel, and further complicates the affair by drawing into it Rupert Lee, another officer, who has been rejected by Vivian Darvelle, and drowns his sorrow in drink.

The scene of the play shifts from India to England and centers around the race track where Desborough and Mostyn are again rivals. Each enters a horse in the famous derby. Desborough's patron is "The Sporting Duchess," a woman of untold wealth, whose chief hobby is her racing stable, and who is attracted to Desborough through mutual confidence in the ability to win of Desborough's horse Clipstone.

Enter another character, Mary Almyer, daughter of Desborough's stable trainer, to still further complicate matters. Mary has been betrayed by Mostyn under promise of marriage. Mary discloses her condition to Muriel and Muriel tells Desborough. Desborough then writes her a letter stating that he will provide for her future, but that she must leave his home. He also writes to Vivian Darvelle stating that their former relation be forgotten and that she should no longer remain in his house.

A villainous interchange of these letters brought out by a clever tearing away of the name and repiecing the paper, gives Mostyn an opportunity to induce Muriel to come to his apartments secretly, where she is found by her husband. A divorce then ensues. Rupert Lee, who becomes jealous of Vivian Darvelles infatuation for Mostyn, decides, as his revenge, to unravel the letter mystery and does unravel it, and makes atonement. "The Sporting Duchess" in the meantime is also playing detective and through her efforts the sinner is brought to justice and right is made to prevail.

Of course the great horse race plays an important part, hence you must see this beautiful photoplay to get its full significance. "The Sporting Duchess" is really a motion picture masterpiece and represents a new achievement in photoplay productions.
